"Tommy and Me" hits the stage this weekend.

'I knew all along I had a really good story, it was just a matter of figuring out the best way to tell it'

Ray Didinger talks inspiration behind his autobiographical play "Tommy and Me."

MOLLY GIVEN

Philadelphia is a city known for its passion, and that notion certainly rings true with its sports teams. Philly fans have a reputation for being loud, rowdy or even a little rude. But what every true Philadelphian knows is that all of that energy actually comes from the deep love of tradition that sports fans have for the City of Brotherly Love.

Acclaimed sports journalist and NFL Hall of Famer Ray Didinger embodies that idea with his autobiographical play "Tommy and Me," following his friendship with the popular Eagles football player and his campaign to get McDonald into the NFL Hall of Fame.

Now in its fourth year, the touching play is back at Theatre Exile and will run from Aug. 9 to 25.

"I had always thought about trying to tell the story in some way, I just couldn't quite decide what was the best way to tell it," says Didinger. "I had thought about possibly writing a book, but then I thought it didn't quite feel like a book. But it certainly felt like more than just a newspaper article."

Didinger is well-known and has a colorful history in writing, but working on a play presented a new challenge for him. For that reason, he recruited longtime theater director Joe Canuso to read over the original script and help take the story to new heights. "I figured if I got a script together and could bring it to someone in the theater community, I would have them take a look at it and see what they think. I knew all along I had a really good story, it was just a matter of figuring out the best way to tell it," says Didinger. "Joe was one of the only people I knew in the theater community. So I brought him the show and Joe read it over and he liked it. He helped me smooth out some of the storytelling, but he's been the driving force behind it really since the first day. He's directed each of the last three years and he's going to direct the fourth."

Didinger and Canuso worked together to help bring the compelling story to life, and they both knew right from the start that there was something truly special about it. "This was a story that I had lived and I knew it would resonate with people, and not just football fans, but everyone," adds Didinger.

Didinger first met McDonald at an Eagles training camp after already idolizing the wide receiver for years. As time went on and Didinger grew up, he realized that he himself needed to give something back to his lifelong hero by securing him a spot in the NFL Hall of Fame.

"He really deserved to be in the Hall of Fame, he was an amazing player. With every Hall of Fame there always ends up being people who fall through the cracks for various reasons, and there are always some truly great players out there that end up getting overlooked or forgotten, and that happened with Tommy," says Didinger. "Because I had this relationship with him and because he was such an inspiration to me as a kid, I just wanted to rectify that and get him what he deserved. I knew this was the one thing he really wanted. If I could help him achieve that, it would be my way of giving something back to him."

That passion really resonates with Philadelphia sports fans, and theater fans in general. After each performance of "Tommy and Me," there are talkbacks where the audience can ask Didinger, Canuso and the cast questions and give feedback of their own. Didinger says that is one of the most rewarding parts of the whole experience for him.

"Tommy and Me" is an autobiographical look at Didinger's friendship with Tommy McDonald.

"In many cases, what you'll get [with the audience] is that they'll relate their own stories that are similar — games that they saw at Franklin Field or times they've encountered Tommy McDonald. It's a really lovely way to bring the whole evening together," says Didinger. "But one of the most gratifying aspects of the talkbacks is, there always is one person that will say they aren't even a sports fan, but they like theater and they came here just to see the play, and they really cared for this character and loved this story. That's what really touches me and makes me feel good."

"Tommy and Me" not only showcases the impact a hero can have on a child's life, it's also a love letter to Philadelphia sports in general and highlights what makes the Philly teams the most special in the country.

"When the Eagles finally won the Super Bowl a couple of years ago, I had a lot of people and writers around the country that called me up and asked, 'What does this mean for the city of Philadelphia?' It's a hard thing to get your arms around but I really do think that there is something unique and special about Philadelphia and its sports teams," says

Didinger. "Part of it has to do with the makeup of the city. Philadelphia is a place where I think people are born, raised, work and die here. When you have that kind of generational culture rooting for one set of particular teams, it develops a real kind of bond. These teams become part of who you are and part of your identity."

But what Didinger truly hopes audiences take away from the show is the impact a hero can have on someone at a young age, and how that child can carry that impact with him for the rest of his life.

"What 'Tommy and Me' really is, is a story about a little boy and his hero. That's something that I think anybody can relate to. We all have heroes growing up, whoever they may be, and they become your inspiration and your role model. It's about the athlete and the hero giving to the little boy early on in his life — giving him friendship and giving him sport and letting him feel like he's a part of his life. And years later, the boy is able to give something back to him."

It's peachy

The Peddler's Village Peach Festival and Sidewalk Sale is this weekend. MOLLY GIVEN

August is National Peach Month, and in honor of the juicy fruit, historic Peddler's Village is hosting their Peach Festival and Sidewalk Sale this weekend. Every Philadelphian is invited out to indulge in delicious treats, enjoy live music and overall get a little peachy.

The 2019 Peach Festival will feature plenty of fun and sweet events highlighting locally grown peaches from Bechdolt's Orchards of Bucks County and peach baked goods at Lucky Cupcake Company's Village bakery. Guests who stop by the Village General Store can shop for mouth-watering bites including peach pies, peach butters, artisanal jams and even other Peach Festival signature merchandise. Other peach treats will also be sold at outdoor vendors, carts and inside a few of the restaurants and shops as well. As a bonus, any peach fanatic can specially preorder a double-crust, 9-inch peach pie today to pick up at the festival this weekend.

Visitors can also enjoy family-friendly activities, kids' crafts and live entertainment throughout both days of the Peach Festival. Live entertainers include Toby Mochel and a Few Good Men, Trin-

Jefferson Health changing lives with respiratory institute

In cooperation with Jefferson Health
HOME OF SIDNEY KIMMEL MEDICAL COLLEGE

ASK JEFFERSON HEALTH:

Respiratory disease is a catch-all term for a variety of pulmonary illnesses. When left unchecked, certain conditions can lead to chronic illness and even death. Jefferson Health is out to change that, partnering with National Jewish Health — the leading respiratory care hospital in the nation — in creating the Jane and Leonard Korman Respiratory Institute Jefferson Health and National Jewish Health.

Metro connected with Jesse Roman, M.D., CEO of the Jane and Leonard Korman Respiratory Institute — Jefferson Health and National Jewish Health. Here, respiratory patients can expect the highest level of care that's backed by research excellence and the field's top experts.

What type of pulmonary conditions are treated at the institute?

Respiratory disease is a very serious situation in the U.S. If we look at chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD) alone, there are close to 20 million people suffering from it. At the Jane and Leonard Korman Respiratory Institute, we specialize in all types of respiratory diseases, from minor issues to more serious conditions. This includes asthma, COPD and idiopathic pulmonary fibrosis (IPF), among others.

How has partnering with National Jewish Health been a game changer?

First, it has provided infrastructure to deliver the best patient-centered care. Another example is education. I have fellows who are now receiving a better education because they're seeing a higher caliber of delivery of care. Trainees and faculty who go on to National Jewish Health to see how they do things come back with great insights. What they bring is a different perspective to make us think about how we can do things a little better.

How are you using research to improve patient care?

The Jane and Leonard

Korman Respiratory Institute has labs where our researchers are doing everything from cellular studies to genetic studies to stem cell studies and more. It's uncovering amazing things. For example, we now have some data to suggest that during development, if you or your mother are exposed to a number of environmental things, you may be predisposed to lung disease as an adult.

Clinical trials also come into play. If you want to do a clinical trial, it isn't uncommon to be able to find 50 patients in a year to participate. But now it isn't out of the ordinary to get, say, 150 patients because we can recruit them from a larger network, thanks to our partnership with National Jewish Health. This enables us to put clinical trials together faster, get answers faster, and deliver medicine or new technology to patients faster and at a lower cost.

It sounds like education is a big part of the equation.

Our doctors became part of this network to educate themselves. We do frequent conferences on respiratory health where we connect with National Jewish Health and their other partner Mount Sinai. We regularly present information on difficult cases, and then we all have the opportunity to comment on these cases, make suggestions and share insights. So patients aren't just seen by myself; they're actually being cared for by a large group of experts who put their brains together to give them the best care. That's a big thing.

The respiratory institute, which continues to function because of the continuing support of the Jane and Leonard Korman Family Foundation, is dedicated to innovation, education and research to deliver the best respiratory care. To learn more, call 1-800-JEFF-NOW.

Fun things to do at the Borgata before summer ends

Check out the hotel's new sportsbook and exciting upcoming shows.

MADELINE PRESLAND

Unfortunately, summer can't last forever. It's time to make the most of the season's final days for exploring boardwalks and having fun in the sun at the Jersey Shore. In addition to its proximity to gorgeous beaches, the Borgata in Atlantic City has plenty of entertainment and luxurious perks to enjoy. Whether you want to stay for a whole week or stop for a night to see a show, here's what you need to see and do while you're there.

Moneyline

The Borgata just opened Moneyline Bar & Book this season. The sports bar is the perfect place to get together to watch a game, enjoy some beers or join the fun by visiting the betting windows. With a 40-foot-wide LED wall, you won't miss any of the game action. The menu of elevated bar snacks includes giant Bavarian pretzels, fish tacos and slam-dunk sliders.

They even offer special packages for Fantasy Football parties. Get together with your league in a space decked out with draft boards, Wi-Fi and the perfect menu for football snacks or an all-you-can-eat dinner.

Spa packages

The hotel's Spa Toccare has an irresistible selection of summer specials for the perfect pamper session. Indulge in a massage and a coconut scrub for a Sole Restoration ($110), or focus on taking care of your skin after spending time at the beach. The spa is offering a hydrating aloe body wrap special ($110) to help calm and moisturize all over. Or focus on a facial to help prevent sun damage. The "Sun-sational" facial ($120) uses infrared and amber lights in addition to an aloe treatment to accelerate your skin's healing process.

UPCOMING SHOWS

Jerry Seinfeld

Don't miss the legendary comedian's show this weekend. Known for his popular sitcom and for his latest work on Netflix's "Comedians in Cars Getting Coffee," Seinfeld is a must-see act for any comedy lover.

Aug. 9, 8 p.m., Borgata Event Center, $99-$199

"Jersey Fresh"

Foodies will love this event highlighting the best summer produce in New Jersey. Enjoy four courses prepared by Chef Thomas Biglan along with local beers from Tuckahoe Brewing Company and an afternoon of learning about the Atlantic City food scene.

Aug. 10, 2 p.m., The Metropolitan, $44

Trevor Noah

Plan ahead for Labor Day weekend, and don't miss the comedian's stop in AC. The "Daily Show" host and bestselling author brings his "Loud and Clear" tour to the Borgata for a night of hilarious social commentary and storytelling.

Sept. 1, 7 p.m., Borgata Event Center, $59-$99

The Borgata is located at 1 Borgata Way, Atlantic City, New Jersey. To book a room or purchase event tickets, visit theborgata.com.

Actor Chris Lowell on season 3 of 'Glow' and being on set with Geena Davis

The hit show returns to Netflix this Friday.
PAT KING

This weekend, the hit Netflix series "Glow" will be returning for its third season as it follows the Gorgeous Ladies of Wrestling as they take their show to Vegas. Finding a residency in a theater amongst the glitz and glamour of "Sin City" shows the ladies a new perspective on what it takes to succeed in show business amongst the town's crowded field of entertainment. What sacrifices will they have to make in order to elevate the show to the potential that they know it has?

"What I found so moving about the third season is that it's a real empathetic showcase of the life of a performer," says actor Chris Lowell, who plays Bash Howard, the onetime financier of the production and the show's announcer. "Not just a wrestler, but any actor. I think a big part of it is, like if you are doing a play or something, there is so much excitement and buzz and stress and manic energy leading up to opening night. And then, once the show is set and you are doing it night after night and show after show, it really starts to take a different kind of muscle to maintain. It really starts to become about, how are you maintaining your physical and mental health? How are you trying to keep it fresh? How do balance such an insane work schedule with family or friendships? That's something that anyone who has done this, ever, can relate to."

As the third season unfolds, many of the show's stars come face-to-face with an uglier side of show business that was only hinted at during their brief time on the air. Now that they have arrived as performers in one of the business's most notorious hubs, what compromises will they need to make in order to be successful?

"When you're an actor, when you first start out, all you care about is acting. Then it's a real scary moment in your life when you've achieved what you thought you wanted and realize that it's not everything that you thought it was going to be," explains Lowell. "In fact, you want more. Some of those things that you want are in conflict with the choices you've made as an artist. How do you get that balance? I think all of those things are universally felt and powerful and it's a really great thing to watch these characters go through that this season."

ter Bash, finding success in Vegas means that he has to hide any evidence of his homosexuality, and when we meet him in season 3, he is throwing himself fully into the marriage he stumbled into with wrestler Britanica. Lowell was amazed to find out about the conservative nature of such a notoriously over-the-top and openly promiscuous town during the '80s, when the show takes place.

"The level of homophobia that existed in Vegas in the '80s is not what I would have expected," says Lowell upon reading the scripts from showrunners Liz Flahive and Carly Mensch. "The reality is, when Liberace has to stay in the closet, you know you're in a homophobic town."

Bash is certainly at a crossroads in his life where he needs to either come to terms with himself or keep his secrets hidden in order to navigate the waters of success. Lowell assures that those answers won't be found easily.

"Bash is still on his psychosexual odyssey and I think that he definitely makes progress in that search for himself," he says. "But it doesn't necessarily mean by the end of the season that he knows all of the answers. I still think he has miles to go before he sleeps."

The show features one of the strongest casts on television right now, with stellar performances from Allison Brie as Ruth, Betty Gilpin as Debbie and Marc Maron as the wrestling show's director, Sam Silvia. The third season also will welcome Oscar-winning actor — and overall legendary person — Geena Davis to its cast as Sandy Devereaux St. Clair, a onetime Vegas showgirl who is now the entertainment director of the Fan-Tan Hotel and Casino where the show is in residence. So, what did Lowell think of being on set with such a legend of the screen?

"Geena and I had a lot of fun together," Lowell says. "I think everybody was so nervous when she came on set and was trying to be either calm and collected or give her her space. I just immediately started asking questions about 'A League of Their Own' and that she's an Olympic archer, a part of MENSAs, and what it was like filming 'Thelma and Louise.' I had no shame in my fanboy crush on her and the work that she's done. I think Geena had a lot of patience with me, which I could not be happier about. It was great to be in the presence of the legend that she is."

Joe Gatto of 'Impractical Jokers' on the joy of 'punishing' your friends

The hit truTV hidden-camera show just got picked up for season 9 PAT KING

It was recently announced that the hit hidden camera comedy, "Impractical Jokers", will be returning for its ninth season next year. The show is rated the number one comedy on cable and was responsible for ushering the great roster of comedies on truTV. I caught up with one of the group's founding members, Joe Gatto, to talk about getting picked up for a new season ahead of tonight's season eight midseason return at 10 p.m.

"Impractical Jokers" just got renewed for its ninth season. Did you ever think the show would make it to nine seasons, let alone the No. 1 comedy on cable?

No! I mean, I was happy to get episode two! Season eight, we're going to hit our 200th episode, which is just insane to me. And then to get greenlit to go for another season is just beyond any wild expectations, you know? Right, right. That's like, no, in between seasons, you know, um, you know, as you've gone along, you know, I guess like, um, what's the preparation like between seasons? Like, um, do you guys kind of like sit in there? You know, there's this, there's only so much you can divulge between you and the rest of the group because you're, you're trying to make everyone feel uncomfortable.

What is preparation for each new season like?

Well, there's a lot of different ways that things come up with the show. We spend so much time together, like with our touring and you know, I'm with these guys every basically almost every day in my life. I show them more than my family. You know, there was one point actually that we show each other for 52 days straight. Wow. Nobody should see each other that much. So we, uh, you know, we, we either, you know, we'll be around and doing something and, you know, we live our lives together. We'll go shop-

Trump visits El Paso, Dayton as protesters shout, 'Do something!'

The president was met in Ohio with chants of "You are why."

U.S. President Donald Trump met victims and first responders from last weekend's deadly shootings in Texas and Ohio on Wednesday, and chanting protesters accused him of inflaming tensions with anti-immigrant and racially charged rhetoric.

In El Paso, on the border with Mexico, Trump visited the University Medical Center where wounded victims were treated after a man who had posted an anti-immigrant manifesto online killed 22 people at a Walmart store on Saturday.

Hundreds of protesters, some holding signs reading "Trump is racist," "Love over hate" and "Send him back!"

Protesters gather around a baby Trump balloon to voice their rally against gun violence and a visit from U.S. President Trump following a mass shooting in Dayton. REUTERS gathered under a broiling sun at a nearby park to condemn Trump and his presence in El Paso.

In a visit earlier in the day to Dayton, Ohio, that was mostly out of public view, Trump met shooting victims at Miami Valley Hospital where the wounded were treated after nine people and the suspect were killed in a rampage early on Sunday. It was the second of two mass shootings 13 hours apart that shocked the country.

Crowds of protesters outside the hospital and in downtown Dayton chanted "Do something!" and "You are why," and held signs reading "Hate not welcome here" and "Stop this terror."

White House spokeswoman Stephanie Grisham said the president and first lady Melania Trump met several victims in their hospital rooms and others who had been discharged in Ohio, and thanked the medical staff for their work.

"It was a warm and wonderful visit," Trump said on Twitter. "Tremendous enthusiasm & even love."

The back-to-back massacres have reopened the national debate over gun safety.

As he left the White House, Trump said he wanted to strengthen background checks for gun purchases and make sure mentally ill people did not carry guns. He predicted congressional support for those two measures but not for banning assault rifles.

"I can tell you that there is no political appetite for that at this moment," Trump told reporters at the White House. "But I will certainly bring that up. ... There is a great appetite, and I mean a very strong appetite, for background checks."

In Dayton, Trump was greeted at the airport by a bipartisan group of state and local officials, including Democratic Dayton Mayor Nan Whaley and Democratic U.S. Sen. Sherrod Brown.

They told reporters afterward they urged Trump to call on Senate Republican leader Mitch McConnell to bring the Senate back from its summer recess to work on a House-passed bill that expands background checks on gun buyers.

Brown said he asked Trump to promise he would sign that bill. "He only said that we will get things done," Brown said, adding the president had been "comforting" to the victims. REUTERS

Public pools begin to shut down

Get your laps in: Philly's public swimming spots are closing down this month.

BECCA GLASSER-BAKER
Rebecca.Glasser@metro.us

With August upon us, summer is soon coming to a close, which means Philly's days of splashing in the sun are numbered.

According to the Philadelphia Parks and Recreation Department, well over 70 pools are shutting down for the 2019 summer season. The citywide public pool shutdown will begin rolling out this week, and continue throughout the rest of August.

Inquirer.com reports that pool season only lasts for about six weeks, with most pools opening around mid-June and closing at the start of August. Closures will start on Friday, Aug. 9, and continue until the final day of pool season, on Friday, Aug. 23.

Vazquez sworn in as Puerto Rico's governor after court ousts Pierluisi

Puerto Rico got its third governor in less than a week on Wednesday just hours after the bankrupt U.S. territory's supreme court ruled that Pedro Pierluisi's assumption of the office was unconstitutional and ordered him to leave.

The island's justice secretary, Wanda Vazquez, was sworn in as governor at the supreme court in San Juan.

A unanimous decision by the nine-member high court nullified Pierluisi's governorship based on the fact his earlier appointment as secretary of state and next in line for governor had not been confirmed by both chambers of the legislature.

Pierluisi, who was given until 5 p.m. local time by the court to vacate the office, said he "must step aside and support" Vazquez.

"This is a time when we must all unite for Puerto Rico, leaving behind any partisan, ideological or personal agendas," he said in a statement.

Vazquez last week initially expressed an unwillingness to take over the island's top government post after being targeted by protesters for being too close to disgraced

Gov. Ricardo Rossello, who left office last Friday.

In a statement following the court ruling, Vazquez said: "Puerto Rico needs certainty and stability."

The high court's ruling followed weeks of political turmoil with Rossello resigning after days of protests demanding he step down.

"This is a time when we must all unite for Puerto Rico, leaving behind any partisan, ideological or personal agendas."

Offensive chat messages between Rossello and his closest allies and federal corruption charges against two former members of his administration sparked the protests, which drew around a third of the island's 3.2 million people to the streets. REUTERS

TV's Emmy Awards, like Oscars, will do without a host Hostless 2019 Oscars saw viewership jump 12 percent.

Producers of the Emmy Awards telecast next month have decided to do without a host so the show can devote more time to celebrating popular series that have recently ended, an executive with Fox, the network that will broadcast the show, said on Wednesday.

Several popular and award-winning TV series concluded this year, including "Game of Thrones," "The Big Bang Theory" and "Veep." The Emmy Awards honoring the best of television will air on Sept. 22.

Hollywood awards shows typically feature a celebrity host who opens the show with a monologue and then keeps the program moving. This year's Emmy producers decided to forgo the host and use the time freed up to honor outgoing series, Charlie Collier, chief executive of Fox Corp.'s Fox Entertainment, said.

"If you have a host and an opening number, that's 15 to 20 minutes you can't use to salute the shows," Collier told reporters at a Television Critics Association event. "We will go hostless this year, and I think it will give us more time to honor those shows."

"There will be entertainment," Collier added. "There will be an opening number. There will be surprises."

The February ceremony for the Oscars, the film industry's highest honors, had no host for only the second time in its history. Comedian

Kevin Hart withdrew from the hosting job after past homophobic tweets resurfaced.

The Oscars ceremony won praise and the U.S. television audience jumped 12 percent from the previous year. REUTERS

Exclusive offer: Free $50 VISA gift card!

Take advantage of our new offer at MetroBet.us/Sugar.

MATT BURKE

Matt Burke is a veteran sports journalist and the Founder and Editor in Chief of MetroBet.

Smart bettors – and frankly those who just like money – will take advantage of all of the risk-free betting cash that's out there right now ahead of the start of the NFL and college football seasons. You're likely already familiar with receiving deposit matches, but now MetroBet is doubling down on giving you extra green in your wallet!

Starting today,

MetroBet will give out free $50 VISA e-gift cards to the first 1,000 people who open an account at MetroBet.us/Sugar!

There's no catch here, all you have to do is open an account, make a deposit (where you'll still get a free deposit match), and bet on at least one game. Literally free money!

Here are the three easy steps:

1. Go to MetroBet.us/Sugar and enter promo code: METROBET
2. Make a deposit and wager a minimum of $25
3. Fill out an easy online form to receive your $50 VISA e-gift card. The form is available here: tinyurl.com/y2nfcj6 and at MetroBet.us under the promotions tab.

We expect these free gift cards to go quickly and this promotion is limited to the first 1,000 sign-ups so act fast! Make tonight's Eagles – Titans game interesting!

Example

Here is an example of how the offer at MetroBet.us/Sugar could work for you.

If you deposited $100, PlaySugarHouse would match that with $100 and you would instantly have $200 to play with.

Let's say you then bet $25 on the Eagles to cover the -3 spread tonight, and they did so, you would instantly have $225 in your account.

On top of that,

MetroBet would then send you the $50 VISA gift card – meaning you basically made the easiest $175 of your life!

Offer terms

The offer is not available to a player who has or has previously had an account with www.playsugarhouse.com. New users only.

TWEET OF THE DAY

@JerryScherwin

When Jon Gruden says on Hard Knocks that he doesn't believe in dreams, only nightmares, he's referring to the Khalil Mack trade, right?

Once your email address has been matched and verified by PlaySugarHouse, MetroBET will email the player a $50 VISA e-gift card within four weeks of form submission.

You may only participate in this promotion once. You must be located in Pennsylvania or New Jersey.

For full offer terms go to MetroBet.us and click on the promotions tab.

Best Bets

Betting on pre-season NFL games is tricky considering you have no idea of when coaches will pull their starters off the field. And rather than breaking down whether or not Clayton Thorson is a better quarterback than Logan Woodside (the Titans' third string QB), it's a better strategy to look at team's recent pre-season performances. Does Eagles head coach Doug Pederson covet wins in the preseason or does he believe the final score is irrelevant? Does Titans coach Mike Vrabel care about exhibition W's? Let's take a look. The Eagles went 1-4 in the pre-season last year, only winning their final pre-season game 10-9 over the Jets. They lost to the Steelers in Week 1 of the 2018 pre-season, 31-14. They lost to the Patriots in Week 2, 37-20. And they lost to the Browns in Week 3, 5-0. That's pretty ugly, but then again the Birds were fresh off winning the Super Bowl a year ago. It's tough to care too much about a game in August, when you achieved the highest of highs in your last real game. As for the Titans, it looks like Bill Belichick disciple Mike Vrabel puts zero stock in pre-season final scores like his old boss as Tennessee went 0-4 last August. The play: $10 on Eagles -3

Frustration setting in for Phillies

Slumping Phils are trying to hold off to their decreasing playoff hopes.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

Frustration is setting in for the Philadelphia Phillies.

It's been a miserable summer for a franchise that was expected to heavily contend for the National League East crown.

While holding the top spot in the division on Jun. 8 with a 37-27 record, the Phillies have gone on a stretch that can only be described as mediocre.

And for a roster that looked so promising on paper heading into the 2019 season, a 22-27

Gabe Kapler's team has struggled this summer and it's finally starting to take its toll. GETTY IMAGES stretch over 49 games was unexpected.

The rough times kept rolling late Tuesday night when the Phillies dropped their fourth result in seven games in an 8-4 loss to an Arizona Diamondbacks team that sold at the trade deadline.

It certainly was a winnable game. The Phillies led 3-2 heading into the bottom-of-the-sixth when starting pitcher Jake Arrieta was lifted for rookie reliever Ranger Suarez.

The veteran righty threw just 80 pitches in five innings of work, allowing two runs on five hits. Normally, he'd be out for at least another inning, but the Phillies have been cautious after discovering a sizable bone spur in Arrieta's right elbow.

In his last six starts, he's averaged just 4.2

innings of work per outing.

Even whilst playing hurt, Arrieta was less than thrilled about his early hook.

"I still feel like I would like to have gone one more," he said. "I told them I'd like to stay in and they decided to pinch-hit for me... after that point, it got away from us the sixth through the eighth."

Suarez couldn't find the strike zone and allowed two runs in the sixth before Blake Parker and Zach Eflin combined to give up four more.

"There's going to be times when it's smart to take me out and times when it's smart to let me go even though it's not comfortable," Arrieta said. "I would have liked one more."

Manager Gabe Kapler can't afford to get these decisions wrong anymore.

The New York Mets are red hot and nipping at the Phillies' tails in both the division and the NL Wild Card race. The St. Louis Cardinals and Milwaukee Brewers were even closer to Philadelphia's final Wild Card spot heading into Wednesday night.

While the pitching, along with Kapler's decision making, has fallen under plenty of scrutinies this season, the Phillies offense has been the least clutch unit in the majors.

Per TeamRankings.com, the Phillies have left an average of 3.82 runners in scoring position per game which is most in the majors. Their .255 average with runners in scoring position ranks 20th in the league.

Phillies slugger Rhys Hoskins was one of the latest to come up empty in a big situation, striking out with the bases loaded with one out in the top of the sixth. Bryce Harper followed up with a strikeout as well on a night the Phillies went 2-for-17 with runners in scoring position.

"I'm telling you, I need to be better," Hoskins said. "I think it starts with me... I think if I'm better, we win that game. I'm missing pitches that I should be putting in play in those situations. It's frustrating."

Eagles position battles to watch tonight

The Eagles meet the Titans at the Linc as the exhibition slate begins.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

The Philadelphia Eagles get their preseason schedule going on Thursday night as they host the Tennessee Titans from Lincoln Financial Field.

While lofty expectations await Doug Pederson's men, there are still question marks throughout the roster as the regular season inches closer.

As fans celebrate the return of NFL football, even if it's of the exhibition variety, here are a few positional battles to watch for throughout the summer.

CORNERBACK

There is no denying that this is one of the most important battles within the Eagles' depth chart this summer.

With Ronald Darby, Jalen Mills and Cre'Von LeBlanc still dealing with injuries, it continues to look like Rasul Douglas, Sidney Jones and Avonte Maddox will be the starting trio of corners come Week 1.

Following LeBlanc's foot injury on the first day of training camp, the Eagles also brought in veteran Orlando Scandrick. The former Cowboy is entering his 11th NFL season and could challenge the trio of Douglas, Jones and Maddox.

Any amount of success from the current regime of defenders could spell trouble for Mills, Darby and LeBlanc as they could come back

All eyes will be on the Eagles' cornerbacks this preseason. GETTY IMAGES as only reserves when healthy.

RUNNING BACK

At the moment, the Eagles could go with a somewhat evenly split rushing attack featuring Jordan Howard and Miles Sanders.

The preseason, however, will decipher which back gets more of the reps.

Howard was acquired from the Chicago Bears for a sixth-round pick while Sanders was taken in the second round out of Penn State.

While Howard has a promising track record and could flourish under the right system, Sanders has been awfully impressive during camp.

DEFENSIVE END

Eagles defensive coordinator Jim Schwartz has shown an affinity for cycling through edge rushers over the years.

After the retirement of Chris Long and the trade of Michael Bennett, there is playing time up for grabs.

The top two spots are set between Brandon Graham and Derek Barnett, but Vinny Curry, Shareef Miller and Josh Sweat will all be in the mix.

Philadelphia decided to bring back Curry on a one-year, $2.2 million contract as a "show me" deal. The 31-year-old has never been able to recapture the magic of a nine-sack 2014 season.

Sweat has an awful lot to prove this season after injury issues limited him to just nine games in 2018. He was a highly-touted pass rusher out of Florida State, but health concerns saw him plummet down the draft board and into the fourth round.

If he's able to stay on the field and live up to expectations, the Eagles will come away with one of the largest steals of that draft.

Miller was the Eagles' fourth-round draft pick in 2019 out of Penn State where he compiled 13 sacks in his final two years at Happy Valley.

CELEBRATE THE SUMMER
IN CHESTER COUNTY'S

BRANDYWINE VALLEY

Music fills the air in a large weekend festival with some of the biggest names in Country music. Citadel Country Spirit USA will be held at the Ludwig's Corner Horse Show grounds from August 23-25!

LONGWOOD GARDENS

Chester County's Brandywine Valley is Home to the World's Premier Horticultural Display Garden and Most Significant Fountain Collection in the United States

Festival of Fountains: Now thru September

Every Thursday, Friday and Saturday night features evening fountain performances. So come and enjoy the glorious gardens, live music, beer garden, dinner, and the jaw dropping fountains.

Fountains & Fireworks: Three shows remaining: August 10, September 1, and September 28.

Fireworks fly, fountains dance, and music sets the tone during these captivating evenings.

The only way to get untimed tickets to Longwood Gardens is by booking an overnight package in select Chester County accommodations. Visit BVStaytheNight.com to learn more and see how you can also receive a Seasonal Delights gift bag featuring:

- America's Garden Capital Passports
- $20 Visa Gift Card
- Free wine tasting for two at Chaddsford Winery
- VIP Shopping Pass to King of Prussia Mall
- Two Complimentary drinks at Terrain Devon Yard Café
- Artisan Exchange $5 gift card (Tip: they are only open on Saturday from 10 a.m.-2 p.m.)

TASTE ON TAP

Chester County's Brandywine Valley has an ever-growing beer and wine scene making it the perfect place to sip and savor.

There's a lot to love about beverages in the Brandywine Valley. With more than 20 craft breweries and 13 wineries dotting the landscape, Chester County's diverse and impressive establishments aren't just places to have a drink, but houses of creativity and flavor. Chat up the makers and learn what goes into each glass—we're sure it will make each sip even more special.

Did You Know? Chester County is lucky to have been at the forefront of the craft brew buzz thanks to local Victory Brewing Company. When they opened their brewery in Downingtown in 1996 "craft beer" was a relatively new term. But their success has spurred more and more locals to not only appreciate the varieties and creative profiles craft beer offers, but to try their hand at it themselves.
